Garfield is to the people of this country in 1880, what Lincoln was to freedom in 1860.

Every time the Democrats try to take one step forward in the campaign, they take two backwards.

Was Mr. Babbitt placed on the Congressional race course because he had "six of the best horses in the State?"

Senator Blaine has a son who is making campaign speeches in Maine. For a man so young he is doing good work.

General Weaver will stump the State of Maine before the State election, and on election day the State of Maine will stump him.

This campaign is a campaign of perplexity to the Democratic party. The more the party tries to do in the canvass the more it is perplexed.

The fusion idea in Maine will cause a regular Waterloo to the Democratic-Greenback ticket. There is no possible hope to save it from a galling defeat.

In twenty-three years, from 1855 to 1877, inclusive, about 20,000 Chippewas came to this country, and it is estimated that about one-half of that number have returned.

As Marshall Jewell says, this campaign is more of a business man's fight than any we have had for many years. And business men know how to vote to protect the business interests of the country.

Colonel Atkins, of the Milwaukee Sunday Telegraph, will deliver the address at the Ripon agricultural fair, on Wednesday, September 1. The Colonel is always interesting and instructive on such occasions.

A party which dares not face the questions it loudly declared up to the time Hancock was nominated, is too weak a party to win in the great contest of 1880. The country demands of a party more backbone than that.

If Mr. Clinton Babbitt's advice to the Democrats was good in 1878, why won't it hold good in 1880? Then he advised Democrats to vote for Mr. Williams because he was an honest man, and a true friend to honest money.

This is a year when business men are going to vote more independently than ever before. There are thousands of them all over the country who have heretofore voted the Democratic ticket, who will this year vote to confine the era of prosperity by supporting Garfield.

General E. N. Bates, who at one time was a Greenback candidate for State treasurer of Illinois, comes out for Garfield and Arthur. He says the currency question is forever settled, and a Union soldier there should be no hesitation as to what candidate he should vote for, Garfield, who represents the loyal sentiment of the North, or Hancock, who represents Confederate ideas and the principles of the Lost Cause.

Several months ago the Gazette published some accounts of alleged mineral deposits in the Northern part of this State. Since then the lands said to contain the rich deposits have been more thoroughly examined, and on Monday evening, Hon. Philletus Sawyer, of Oshkosh, Hon. John T. Kingston, of Neenah, Mr. W. H. H. Cash, of New Lisbon, and other prominent capitalists, held a meeting in Milwaukee for the purpose of devising some plan to gain possession of the tract of land said to contain the lead and silver ore. An assay of the ore reveals the fact that it contains as high as 61 per cent of pure lead to the ton, and more than 40 ounces of silver. While the meeting was intended to be strictly private, these facts were learned by chance. Another meeting will be held in the course of a week to complete arrangements to get possession of the land in question.

The Republican county convention meets to-morrow to make nominations for county officers. The importance of the action of the convention can not be over-estimated. For two or three of the positions there will virtually be no contest. Nor the others there are several candidates for each, but taking an impartial view of the matter the result will not be difficult to conjecture. Those who have possession of the offices are men who have done their duty faithfully, and the candidates who will go before the convention claiming that there should be a change, are capable and trustworthy. Probably the bone of contention will be the office of sheriff. For this there are several prominent candidates. It is to be hoped that the delegates representing the city of Janesville will see the importance of giving the nomination to the country. Even-handed justice demands that this be done. It will not only be giving what is due to that part of the county, but it will have the important effect of giving strength to the party. Big majorities which the Republicans so earnestly hope for this year, can come only through harmony and enthusiasm, and harmony and enthusiasm can only be secured through a just and wise division of the places of profit and trust at the disposal of the party. These are facts which should not be forgotten by the Republican county convention to-morrow.

It seems that there were no frauds attempted in taking the census in Georgia. That State has decreased in population over seventy-five thousand in the last ten years, and considering that Georgia is called the Empire of the South, the result of the enumeration is a subject for grave reflection. Multitudes have left the State in search of better homes elsewhere. Why? The Atlanta Methodist Advocate, gives some of the reasons why the population of Georgia has decreased. It says that "wages have been kept down by concerted action to a point which robs families of laborers of the comforts of life, and thousands have been cheated out of much of their just earnings. Colored people have been whipped and murdered without regard to age, sex, condition, or character, till many have fled from the jaws of beasts of prey. Persecution for opinion has prevailed to such an extent that multitudes of white people have sought homes in other portions of our country."

Then again, the Advocate says, "that Bourbon politics has had much to do in driving people from Georgia does not admit of doubt. Directly after the war one Ben. Hill, in a speech in this city, advised the women of Georgia not to walk under the shadow of the American flag, and if their husbands voted the Republican ticket he said they ought to desert them. He also advised social ostracism of the narrowest and most objectionable type. This became the policy of the Democrats, and fill this day this spirit has ruled in the dominant party." What is true of Georgia, is true of nearly all the States in the South. The oppression of the poor, the low wages given to the workmen, political and social ostracism, and the defiant air of the Bourbon element in the South, have brought shame upon the heads of those who control that portion of the country, and have driven thousands of hard-working and honest families from these States.

A GLANCE AT THE SITUATION.
There has never been a Presidential campaign which opened more favorably to the Republicans than the present. The temper of the people has been tested, or in other words, the lines have been squarely drawn between each party and its candidates, and what the result will be can hardly be called a doubtful question. The Republicans have not indulged in any brag. They have not become over-enthusiastic nor encouraged over-seeing confidence. From the start they knew they had a Solid South to contend with; and at the beginning of the campaign they knew that New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Indiana, were doubtful States. But when the Cincinnati convention did its work refusing to nominate a man who had any known political opinions, the Republican cause was strengthened, and from that day to the present, it prospects have grown brighter and brighter. The grand history of the Republican party and the almost matchless record of General Garfield, together with his commanding abilities as a statesman and his spotless name, have been weighed in the balance of public opinion with the infamy of the Democratic party and the career of Hancock at New Orleans, and the sentiment is spreading all over the North, that the Republican party, its principles, and its candidates, must succeed.

This is the outlook to-day. There can be no doubt about Maine. In making an alliance with the Greenbackers the Democrats have made a serious blunder, and have not only lost Maine thereby, but they have lost the confidence of many Democratic business men in other States. An animated canvass by the Republicans in that State is now going on, and those who have carefully studied the temper of the people there say that the result is in no manner of doubt in that State.

As to Ohio, the Republican prospects were never more cheering than they are at this time; and one of the encouraging circumstances is that the situation is growing better for the Republicans. Instead of being a doubtful State, it is reckoned one of the surest States in the North. The Democrats have claimed Indiana, and to make the State sure for the Democrats, placed English on the ticket for Vice President. But this has proved a serious blunder for the Democracy. The name of English is a synonym for oppression among the poor people of Indiana. He has sold them out of house and home, has turned the widows and the fatherless out of doors, and has accumulated millions of property by cut-throat mortgages. These facts, and the additional fact that the Democratic party is more or less disgraced in that State while the Republicans are united and have a strong State ticket in the hold, give the assurance that it will go Republican in October, and will be carried by Garfield in November.

The reports from New York, which have appeared in the Gazette from time to time during the past two or three weeks, show a most encouraging situation of affairs for the Republicans. A vigorous canvass will be made there, and beside this, the party is better organized, is more united, and is more hopeful than the Democrats. A pretty thorough canvass of nearly all the counties in the State indicates conclusively that the Republican prospects in New York are more encouraging than they have been for many years. The same can be said of Connecticut. The Republicans there have made excellent and strong nominations for State officers, and the party will draw out its fullest strength at the polls. The Republican principle of encouraging manufactures and protecting workmen, a principle which the Democrats oppose by advocating free trade, will do much to give Connecticut to the Republicans.

This is a candid view of the situation at this time; and inasmuch as the Republican ticket is growing stronger as the campaign advances, there are sound reasons to hope that New York, Indiana and Connecticut will be among the States to cast their electoral vote for Garfield and Arthur.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

One of the Most Blood-Curdling Crimes that ever Stained the Annals of Wisconsin.

MADEIRA, Aug. 23.—Information was received in this city today of one of the most blood-curdling crimes that has ever stained the annals of Wisconsin. It seems that Martin Winick and wife, who resided near Anton Engel's store, just over the line between Dane and Columbia counties, have not lived happily together for many years. Both of them had been married before, and had grown-up children, some of whom reside in the neighborhood. Quarrels had been frequent in the family about these relatives, Winick claiming that his wife took away everything he brought to the house and gave it to her children, keeping him poor for their support. Sunday night their dispute terminated in a fearful tragedy. About 10 o'clock some of the neighbors saw flames issuing from Winick's house, and, hurrying to the spot, were surprised at not seeing a single person. An entrance was forced into the house, where a scene awaited the crowd. The dead body of Mrs. Winick was found riddled with shot and lying in a pool of blood. Further search was made, and the finding of the old man's body on his bed, bleeding from two ghastly wounds. They were hastily carried out of the burning building, where they had become somewhat scorched, and laid in a place of safety to await the coroner's inquest. The inquest was held this morning, and from the facts developed, it is thought that in a fit of rage Winick killed his wife with a shotgun, and, after setting fire to the house that they might be consumed together, shot himself in the head with a revolver, and as this did not prove fatal, laid down on his bed and fired the remaining charge in the abdomen into his own body. Of course, all kinds of theories are rife as to the cause of the dreadful deed, but most seem to think that it was done on account of the trouble which had arisen between the pair about their children, and that long years of tickling and recrimination finally culminated in the tragedy recorded above.

DOUBLE MURDER.

Another Man Shoots His Wife and Then Suicides.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—Simon Zimmerman residing with his family in a business block on Clybourn avenue, shot and killed his wife at an early hour yesterday morning. He then reclined by her side, placed the dead woman's arm around his neck, and fired a bullet into his own head, dying instantly. Two children, one 3 and the other 1 year of age, were in the room and witnessed the tragedy, the dreadful report of which they could not comprehend. The doors to the apartments were locked, and it was not until late evening, twelve hours after the fatal shooting, that the dead bodies were discovered. The little ones had been all that time alone with the corpses of their parents, and without food or water.

HAZELTON.

He Will be Nominated for Congress To-day The Second and Fourth District.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 24.—Information received here from the Third Congressional district is to the effect that the Hon. George C. Hazelton, the present Congressman, will be nominated by the Republican Convention that meets at Plattville to-morrow. There has been considerable opposition manifested to his re-nomination by other ambitious aspirants to the office, but the latest advices are to the effect that no combination is likely to be made that will end in Hazelton's defeat.

In this (the Fourth) district some of the primaries have already been held, and the delegates thus far chosen seem to favor the nomination of Casper M. Sanger, the most prominent Republican in America, who is a representative German, and was elected Sheriff of Milwaukee county in the face of the strongest opposition. If he is nominated he will make it lively for Mr. Deuster.

A letter from Madison states that the re-nomination of the Hon. E. C. Caswell in the Second District is almost certain.

MAINE.

Stanley Matthews Opinion of the Situation in Maine.

CINCINNATI, August 23.—Stanley Matthews returned to-day from a ten days' canvass in Maine. He spoke at Portland, Lewiston, Farmington, Bath, and several other places. Speaking of the outlook this evening he said: "There is every reason to suppose that the Republicans are going to carry the State by a decided and emphatic majority. The estimates vary from 5,000 to 10,000 majority. I have great confidence in believing that it will probably exceed the maximum estimate. I think this because, in addition to the general issues of the national canvass, the most prominent feature of the campaign is the discussion of the State issue growing out of the abhorrent attempt of the Unionists, last year, to revolutionize the Government by fraud, and forgery, and false certificates of returns. The exposure of these attempted frauds has been complete and thorough, and has become so perfectly well understood that not only is the indignation of the Republicans excited, but the fair-minded and honest men of the opposition are disgusted with their leaders, and will take their revenge, in any manner, by refusing to vote for the ticket, for in numerous instances men were put up for office who were notorious and active in the fraud of last year, and everywhere the matter is maintained and defended by the organs and representatives of the Union party. I met Mr. Blaine up there, and he and I spoke at one of the meetings. He is busy at his home in Augusta, and is not taking the whole campaign in the State. He is thoroughly aroused, and is very energetic and watchful."

NEW YORK.

The Differences Between the Democratic Factions.

New York, Aug. 23.—The Parkner, or Tilden, State Democratic Committee has at last been forced into calling a meeting to consider the propriety of holding a Convention. The Tammany anti-Tildenites, however, have no faith in the Parknerites, and do not believe they have any real intention to act in harmony with Tammany and so to make a united and strong vote possible. It may be said as a certainty that both factions are ready to knife Hancock in order to carry on their contest with each other. Tammany cares more for the control of the city patronage than for the Presidency, and the Tilden people, as a mere matter of spite, would a little sooner than not run the campaign into the ground. John Kelly's organ charges Parkner with getting out of the city, and says his committee has retained the work of the campaign in this State, and consequently imperiled the success of the Democracy. The eleventh hour has already passed, the clock is now striking 12. Whether anything is to be accomplished, or whether this late hour will avail either to restore harmony or organize the Democracy of the State for an effective campaign is very doubtful. Judging from the course of the Committee in the past, it does not wish for the union and success of the Democratic party, but only to save itself from defeat and overthrow. But its members will be obliged to exert themselves more wisely and energetically than they yet have done to accomplish even this result, and the end is hardly worth the effort it will cost. That is as near a good feeling as the factions get, and is likely to get. The truth is, the supporters of General Hancock are deeply worried about the open split in this State, and will concentrate their efforts right here to try and bring about at least a patched-up truce, warranted good till the voting is done. War clouds make the Republican hearts boom for Garfield and Arthur.
